

Our Common Life Together

I want to reflect for just a little bit about a phrase that I use often, “Our common life together.” I use it when I invite members and guests alike to Old Buttonwood Hall following the 11 A.M. service, and I use it sometimes in the announcements at the Celebration! Service at 9 A.M. What I mean by this isn’t that what we do together is somehow, well, common. I don’t mean it in the sense of mundane. What I mean is that there is a tie that binds us.

I don’t know if you’ve ever sat through a contentious vote of a congregation or a presbytery, but there is a reason why we almost always wind up singing that old hymn “Blest Be the Tie that Binds” while the votes are being counted. I find I’ve been thinking a lot about the ties that bind us these days.

It’s not just that we’re living in a time of heightened tensions in our political environment as we awaited a resolution to the impasse that our government was in for more than a month. Nor is it because social media has rendered us a hair-trigger away from reaction at most times to whatever is the most recent outrage, and of course the inevitable reaction to the reaction. (Perhaps we should consider the ways that we can all help the world calm down a bit?) The truth is, we’ve always faced divisions.

It’s not because we worship at two different times between nine and eleven and we need, every one of us, to look for the ways that our two worshipping bodies can be together. (My hat is off to the deacons for bringing us together at their wonderful kick-off brunch last fall!) But honestly, more congregations than ours have experienced the metaphorical distance that can occur when we worship in different ways at different times, and they find ways, just as we are, to spend time with one another.

“...the tie that binds us is Jesus Christ.”

---

Nor is it that I fear that the world is becoming more and more fragmented as tenure within corporations dwindles to little more than a turnstile, and economic necessity forces people to move from city to city to make their way professionally. People have always migrated where work was, and healthy communities adapt even as we bid sad farewells to those whose path carries them elsewhere.

No, the tie that binds us is stronger than all of these things... the tie that binds us is Jesus Christ. And when I invite us to spend a little time over a cup of coffee or light refreshments, it is because we are celebrating something deeply important over this small repast... we are saying that we believe that we are sisters and brothers in Jesus Christ, and that means that we care for one another to the extent that we will show up with food again and again for no other reason than that it builds up the body of Christ. And we’re saying that we will give, meaningfully, of our treasure for the nurture of children in the faith even though our children are long grown, or even if we never had any. And we’re saying that when one of us mourns, that we will drop what we are doing long enough to weep with those who weep.

That is what I mean by our common life together. And it is anything but mundane.

—Baron Mullis

Conversations Worth Having...

You heard from me last month that I have invited my friend and mentor, Bill Enright, to spend the weekend with us on March 16-17. Bill will provide an in-service to our officers on Saturday, March 16th, from 10-3. His topic will be how we talk about giving—and it's more than money. I want to invite anyone who has an interest in this topic to attend. I have copies of his book, Kitchen Table Giving in my office, and I'd love to provide one to you. The only request I make is that you commit to read it sometime this year.

Why a conversation about giving? Well, I've already been asked if I am concerned about the level of generosity at First Church, and the answer is, "No, I'm not." I find our membership to be deeply generous. But one of the things I've learned in my time in ministry and my studies on philanthropy is that we can never take giving for granted. We must cultivate our ability to have good conversations about the church and its finances.

Arguably, cultivating the ability to engage in "conversations worth having" is one of the most important things we can experience for ourselves and model for the world. That's why we're partnering with the Presbyterian Foundation to share this conversation with Bill Enright with other churches in our area. This year we are going to talk about giving, and I hope in future years to see First Church as a model for other congregations in taking time, with intentionality, to talk about things that matter.

So if you want to know the number one reason why you should mark your calendar for March 17th, when Bill will teach and preach at First, and for March 16th for his in-service on giving, it would be because we say this to ourselves, "This is my church, and I love it; if there is a conversation going on that is important to our life together, I want to be a part of it."

ADULT CHRISTIAN EDUCATION — FEBRUARY 24THMuslim and Christian Connections on the College Campus: an Interfaith Conversation

*I*t's a typical day at the Christian Association (CA) House at Penn, where Rev. Megan LeCluyse serves as the Campus Minister and Director of the CA at the University of Pennsylvania. She and Patricia Anton, the Chaplain for the Muslim Life Program at Penn, are laughing about a Halal scanning app that Megan has downloaded to determine if the snack foods they share are actually Halal—permissible under traditional Islamic law. Patty is posting a photo of Megan scanning the foods on her Snapchat account. Little will the people at Costco suspect that on her next visit, Megan will be using the handy app to Halal-scan the snacks she buys.

Join us on February 24th at 9:45, when the adult education class will feature Celebration Team Leader Rev. Megan LeCluyse and Patricia Anton, Chaplain of Penn's Muslim Life Program. We'll learn about a close-to-home interfaith experience. The two associations began to share space a year ago, and the chaplains will talk about what the experience has been like and how their students have benefited. Patty's background has often included interfaith work. For Megan, being in this close interfaith relationship is new and has been a wonderful opportunity for building new relationships, learning about Islam and expanding the CA's understanding of hospitality. Feel free to email Megan (lecluyse@upenn.edu) questions you might want us to discuss before the 24th, or bring them with you!

Rev. Sarah Weisiger's Maternity Leave

The Reverend Sarah Weisiger, Minister for Membership and Faith Formation, is on maternity leave from February 1 through March 30. During Sarah's absence, please contact Larry Slagle (larry.slagle@fpcphila.org) for questions about membership. For questions or concerns with respect to Children's Sunday School and/or the Nursery, please contact Emily Roan (emily.roan@fpcphila.org) or Karen Marston (karen.marston@fpcphila.org).

ANNUAL MEETING

The Session has set Sunday, February 10th, as the date of our Annual Meeting which will be held in Old Buttonwood Hall at noon, following the 11:00 A.M. worship service. All members are urged to attend this important meeting. A light lunch will be served.

The congregation will (1) receive the 2018 Annual Report, (2) hear and act on the recommendations of the Nominating Committee to elect officers and members of the church's Nominating Committee for 2019, and (3) vote upon a proposed amendment of the Congregational bylaws.

The proposed amendment adds in a new Section XVII, titled "Child, Youth, and Vulnerable Adult Protection Policy," the following:

Consistent with the policy of the Presbytery of Philadelphia that the by-laws of each church incorporate the church's sexual misconduct policy, the applicable portions of the Personnel Policy of the First Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia, including the Workplace Free of Harassment or Discrimination Policy and the Child, Youth, and Vulnerable Adult Protection Policy are incorporated by reference into these Bylaws.

The proposed amended by-laws can be viewed on the First Church website (www.fpcphila.org/policies-bylaws/).

PHILADELPHIA MUSEUM OF ART TOUR – FEBRUARY 27

The Philadelphia Museum of Art is one of the largest and most renowned museums in the country. You will discover beauty, enchantment, and the unexpected among the artistic achievements from the United States, Asia, Europe, and Latin America. The works are thrilling with their brilliant or subdued colors, unique lines, and composition. Each artist's values are universal to every human being and are inspired by the images and sounds of the environment. The creator assembles ideas that express the deepest emotions of life and places them on a canvas or sculpts them from marble. Thus, the artist's soul is connected with ours.

Our guide will be our own Jean Witmer. Jean is a retired teacher who is now devoting her time and talents to the Philadelphia Museum of Art. With two years of intense training and three years' experience, Jean will show us how art reflects the culture of its time and present the collection in the context of world history. We will travel through various countries and centuries and view the style of the period, including baroque, realism, impressionism, abstract expressionism, and others. This is a wonderful opportunity to see magnificent works of art and have our spirits nourished.

Mark the date: Wednesday, February 27. The cost, time of the tour, and other details will be available via email and bulletin announcements closer to the date.

In February, the T&Ts will pick back up with a book discussion and continue regular Wednesday night gatherings. If you would like to host the T&Ts or partner for an activity let us know!

Our goal is to grow closer together as a Twenties and Thirties group, fostering friendships, building trust, and creating a community of support and love for one another.
